The bell at the Oxford School in Fairhaven is lifted off the roof on Saturday, 10/10. The bell was made by American patriot Paul revere in 1795 for a church in the center of town. Around 1914, the school department bought the bell and place it on the school where it signalled the beginning and the end of school and also rang out fire alarms. See page 12 for story. From The Editor

WEST ISLAND — A day late and many dollars short.

Look where I am! Cool, huh?

I got to climb on top of the roof of the Oxford School with the crew working to free the bell from its perch of 100 years (see page 12).

Beth David, Publisher

What a fun time, the next day, too, when hundreds of people showed up to watch the work and pose with the bell. The bell is a bona fide Paul Revere bell. How cool is that!

Be sure to visit our Facebook page for lots more photos of the project.

The visitors center also held its annual Harvest Fun Fair this weekend (see page 7).

I truly hope you all had a chance to get to one or both of these things this weekend. The weather is starting to turn cold, so these kinds of outdoor events are about to stop for the year.

There are a few left though. See the happenings pages on 5, 8 & 9 for events around the whole region.

This weekend we also have the opportunity to see some live theater in our own town hall. We have a wonderful auditorium upstairs and One Theater Group is performing James and the Giant Peach, a family friendly show suitable for all ages.

The play starts tonight (10/15) and goes through to Sunday, so you have plenty of chances to catch it. See page 5 for details.

And....it's OCTOBER. That means HALLOWEEN (yes, I'm shouting).

Please, get your info to me if you have a home haunt that you want included on the annual Halloween Trail. Halloween falls on a Saturday, so I want to run the trail issue the week before to give people time to plan a little. Also, some people have their haunts open the weekend before, so I'd like to let my faithful readers know all about it.

PLEASE, PLEASE, PLEASE send me your info. Only ONE person sent the info to me last week (yes, I'm shouting again).

One more thing, with Halloween and our overindulgence in candy and all things sweet and not necessary for our good nutrition: The food pantries need your help this time of year.

Please remember them. This year, the Boy Scouts are collecting food for the pantry at the Halloween Parade. The parade is NEXT Sunday, 10/25, so don't get confused.

Until next week then...See ya,

Support the Food Pantry

The Shepherd's Food Pantry at the Long Plain United Methodist Church in Acushnet spends more than $5,500 each month to keep the shelves stocked. It serves more than 120 families each week.

Halloween is just around the corner

That spooky time of year is almost here. Time for all you home haunters to let us know if you'll be welcoming innocent souls to get scared in your home haunts.

Every year, the Neighb News publishes a Halloween Trail issue for our readers to follow on Halloween night. This year's issue will be published on 10/21 the week before the the big day. So deadline to let us know is this Friday, 10/16.

Please email a photo and your address to NeighbNews@comcast.net to let our readers know that your home is welcoming trick-or-treaters.

Let us know if you'll be decorated before 10/31 or only on the big day.

If you accept donations for a cause (or your own cause), let us know that, too. No professional haunts, please.

Authentic Paul Revere bell removed from atop Oxford School

On Saturday, 10/10, the bell at the Oxford School was taken down in anticipation of the sale of the building. The bell was cast by American patriot Paul Revere in 1795 and was the first bell in the center of town, commissioned by the Second Church of Christ, which was located at the Euro building on the corner of Main and Center Streets, and became the First Congregational Church. Sometime around 1914, the school department bought the bell and built a cupola on top of the Oxford School, where the bell has been ever since. On Friday, 10/9, workers from A#1 Crane worked all day to disconnect the bell from the cupola and prepare both the cupola and the bell for removal the next day. LEFT: Gerry Bettencourt, Master Rigger for A#1 Crane, cuts a 2x4 inside the cupola on top of the Oxford School on Friday, 10/9. MIDDLE: The northern tip of Benoit Square can be seen from the opening in the cupola atop the Oxford School that houses the famed Revere Bell. Appeals approves variance on Babbitt Street

By Beth David Editor

In its only hearing of the night, the Fairhaven Zoning Board of Appeals approved a variance for Scott Winnett to build a house on a nonconforming lot at 27 Babbitt Street at its meeting on October 6.

The hearing had been continued from last month's meeting for ZBA members to get an opinion from town counsel Thomas Crotty on whether or not the board had the authority to approve the change.

Mr. Winnett had argued that the two lots were owned by the same family for decades, and that the bylaws changed, making the extra lot un-buildable.

ZBA member Rene Fleurent argued that the common ownership meant that the lots should not be split off from each other for the purposes of building.

In 1965, the year the famly bought the property, 10,000 square-foot lots met the minimum lot size requirement for building. In 1966, the bylaws changed, requiring 15,000 square feet in the neighborhood.

Mr. Winnett argued that the lots were "grandfathered."

Mr. Crotty wrote that the lots would only be grandfathered for five years.

"This vacant lot is not buildable under the current zoning law, absent the grant of a variance or a change in the zoning by-law," wrote Mr. Crotty. Jeff Tallman of Sitec, representing Jeff Tallman of Sitec, representing the Mr. Winnett, noted other cases in the neighborhood that had received variances.

"These lots have changed hands numerous times," said Mr. Tallman. "[Mr. Crotty's letter] does not say that the board can't grant a variance."

Mr. Fleurent, however, said the situation was similar to one on West Island and one on Narragansett Boulevard that the board did not grant variances for.

ZBA chairperson Peter DeTerra and board member Joseph Borelli both said they disagreed with Mr. Fleurent's assessment.

"The Balsam Street property and this property are ... different," said Mr. Borelli.

"The laws changed," said Mr. DeTerra.

Mr. Tallman also noted that the lots would still be bigger than many in the neighborhood and reiterated that two properties had received variances for lot size.

"And they had changed hands several times," said Mr. Tallman. "But they were issued variances."

In the end, the vote was 4–1 with Mr. Fleurent opposing. ZBA member Peg Cook was absent.

In another matter, the board granted an extension to Thomas and Debra Lambalot for a variance on 30 Fishermans Road.

In a matter not on the agenda, Jack and Lorraine Fournier addressed the board, saying they were under the impression that their variance request would be heard that night.

Mr. DeTerra explained that they would have to wait until next month's meeting. Mr. Fournier expressed dismay, saying he would be away. Mr. DeTerra explained that the process usually takes at least 60 days; abutters need to be notified and a legal ad needs to run in the newspaper.

legal ad needs to run in the newspaper.

"It's a real bummer," said Mr.
Fournier, noting that he paid $155 for a permit application. "We did everything we were supposed to do."

Mr. DeTerra assured Mr. Fournier that he would not have to pay the fee again, even if he waited until the spring.

AROUND TOWN HAPPENINGS

Spooky Music++
"It's creepy and it's kooky,

"It's creepy and it's kooky, mysterious and spooky" ... it's "Music of the Macabre ... and More," a program to benefit the Unitarian Universalist Society of Fairhaven.

The concert, a presentation of the church's Music Committee, will begin at 7:30 p.m. on Sat., 10/24, at the Unitarian Memorial Church, 102 Green St., Fairhaven. Wheelchair access at Center Street driveway.

To get you into the spirit of Halloween, you'll be regaled with spine-tingling music on the organ, some melancholy (and amusing) piano compositions, a couple of Broadway songs (with sad endings), some suitably hair-raising violin tunes, a bit of ghoulish humor, and chilling stories and poems.

Performers include organist Dwight Thomas, pianist/vocalist Tim Evans, baritone Tony Oliva, soprano Joanna Weeks, violinist Keri Benson and her advanced students, and other talented members of the UUSF. Program selections include Bach's Toccata in Fugue in D minor, Chopin piano preludes, "I Hold Your Hand in Mine" by Tom Lehrer, "As Long As He Needs Me" from the musical "Oliver!" and "Spooky Violins Suite."

The suggested donation is $10. Intended for ages 16+ Light refreshments will follow the concert. For more information, call 508-992-7081.

Some car alarms may not work the way you think

A very close friend and her daughter had their cars broken into at their suburban home in the middle of the night. With the doors locked, and alarms set, their side windows had been smashed and the cars ransacked. No "tangible" valuables were taken, but the enormous loss of our sense of "safety" is in the wake!

The vandals entered through the windows. These are relatively new vehicles and no alarm was set off!

Are we being "duped" into paying for car alarms that don't protect us? Is our confidence unwarranted? It's unnerving to say the least!

My first thought was: My God, if I were stopped at a red light, or in a darkened parking lot or any other number of scenarios that run through our minds as women. If children had been in the car...If, if, if. This needs to be looked into.

Manufacturers use "safety" as their biggest selling point. We need to be aware of just what that means!

Harborwalk now open to public

Press Release

On Wednesday, 10/14, Mayor Jon Mitchell, other city officials, community leaders and residents celebrated the official opening of the "Harborwalk" — a new recreational pathway atop New Bedford's famous Hurricane Barrier that reconnects the public to the city's waterfront. The walkway is 3,400 feet long and includes lighting and aluminum railings on both sides.

Shortly after taking office in 2012, Mayor Mitchell called for the reconnection of New Bedford's waterfront with residential and downtown areas. A key element of the Mayor's strategy was construction of a pathway atop the New Bedford Hurricane Barrier.

"When I got into office, I felt that this was an important project for the City to pursue. We had been cut off from the water for fifty years and there was an opportunity for the public to get up on the barrier and experience spectacular water views. I am very proud that New Bedford didn't just talk about making this happen, we did it," said Mayor Mitchell.

'To my knowledge there isn't another walkway like this anywhere in America, one that is elevated high above the ocean line and extends as far as this one does. It is breathtaking. I don't think you can walk, run or bike this pathway without reflecting on what a beautiful place this is," Mayor Jon Mitchell said.

The public may access the Harborwalk from the parking lot at the public boat ramp on Gifford Street, off E. Rodney French Blvd.

Oxford School's Revere bell taken down

By Beth David Editor

With a festive atmosphere created by hundreds of people, some dressed in 1700's duds, the bell that hung in the cupola atop the Oxford School on Main Street in Fairhaven since 1915, was taken down to be preserved. The town has decided to sell the building, and because of its historical significance, the bell is not part of the sale.

Before its life as a school bell, the 756-pound bell was the first in the village of Fairhaven. Commissioned by Isaac Sherman and Sam'l Proctor of the Second Church of Christ, the bell was cast by Paul Revere's foundry (yes, that Paul Revere). In 1812, when Fairhaven became its own entity, the church became the First Congregational Church.

Delivered to the church in what was New Bedford, because there was no Fairhaven yet, in late 1795, it was noted in Paul Revere's books as being sold in 1796. The cost was 100 pounds, 16 shillings.

It was the 12th bell he made.

Documents from his company, news articles that include correspondence from his descendants, and other details authenticate it as a genuine Revere Bell.

For some years, it was disputed that it was his because the company name is not on the bell.

In the same space, however, that the name would normally be stamped, there is an inscription: "THE LIVING TO THE CHURCH I CALL AND TO THE GRAVE I SUMMON ALL.

Revere aficionados believe there simply was not enough room to put the name and the inscription on the bell. At 756 pounds, it is one of the smaller church bells made by Revere.

Patrick Leehey, Research Director at Paul Revere House in Boston, said he believes it the genuine article. He also said it was pretty early in Revere's casting career, so, even if he did not make the bell himself. "He probably supervised the casting of the bell," said Mr. Leehev.

"All the evioverall appearance is the same of all the other Revere bells. The 756 is in the books as the weight. So we feel confident that it is a Revere bell."

He said the final test would be to weigh the bell. He also said it would probably not be exact because the weighing instruments were not as accurate in 1796. But, if it's anywhere around that weight, it's the clincher. As of press time, the weight was not available.

The Fairhaven bell is the third oldest Revere bell known to be in existence.

The first is from 1793 and is at St. James Episcopal Church in Cambridge, Mass. Revere made it for his own church, which no longer exists. The second oldest is from 1795 and is in a church in Groveland, Mass.

> The Fairhaven bell stayed in the old church building, which is now the Euro building. until around 1914, when it was bought by the Fairhaven School Department and moved to the Oxford School.

> Where it once signalled the call to church, it now began summoning children to school, and also called out the alarms for the fire department.

At some point, the clapper that rang the bell from the inside was disconnected and a hammer was installed to ring the bell from the outside.

The old bell did not ring often as the years went by and its maintenance needs increased while it was in the old church building; but it still rang out when president Abraham Lincoln was assassinated in 1865, and again in 1881 when President Garfield was assassinated.

When General Sheridan's body traveled from Nonquitt to New Bedford in 1888, the Fairhaven bell again tolled out of respect.

There was no sign of that kind of seriousness on Saturday, though, as a crowd of several hundred waited at Benoit Square for the final dismantling of the cupola and the bell.

Former Oxford School principal Jenny Xifaras and music teacher Natalie Hemingway pulled on the rope tied to the bell for a ceremonial last ring before work crews from A#1 Crane Service took it all down.

Owner Patrick Carr donated his services, which included a crew of 4–6, a large crane and other heavy equipment for two full days of work.

"It's interesting. We don't do this every day, that's for sure," said Mr. Carr. "I'm glad to help the town out. I'm kind of a history buff. Something as important as the bell should stay in town. That's why I donated my services. There are not too many small towns like Fairhaven. We work together as a community."

Ms. Xifaras served as principal at the school for 29 years, longer than any othe principal. She served in the school department for 42 years.

"I'm excited," said Ms. Xifaras before ringing the bell for the last time. "It's just an honor to be a participant in this last hurrah of the Oxford School."

She said that on Mondays and Fridays, certain students would get to ring the bell: On Mondays to signal the start of the school week, and on Fridays to signal the end of the week.

"Only the fifth graders" had that honor, said Ms. Xifaras.

Ms. Hemingway said she even believes she has a picture somewhere of her grandson ringing the bell.

Waiting outside for the big moment, Donna Blasingame said the Oxford was her alma mater.

"I'm proud that it's a real Paul Revere Bell," said Ms. Blasingame. "I hope they find a beautiful place to put it so we can all enjoy it."

Julie Lunau and her son Noah were visiting all the way from South Australia. They said they could not miss the unique opportunity to watch the bell come down.

"It's very exciting," said Ms. Lunau. "We don't have this sort of stuff at home."

Dressed as Ben Franklin, Bob Cormier, president of the North

Fairhaven Improvement Association, ad-libbed for hours on end as the crowd waited for the bell to get freed.

The suspense ticked on for about an extra hour or so, though, as crews encountered a thick bolt inside each corner of the cupola. So, it took a while longer, but, finally, just before 2 p.m. they managed to get it to the ground, where everyone who wanted to could smack it with a rubber mallet and have a picture taken with the old Revere Bell.

The town has created a bell committee, which will explore options on where to display the bell and then make recommendations to the Selectboard. Meanwhile, the bell is being stored in an

Acushnet town meeting to face 18 articles

By Beth David Editor

Town meeting voters in Acushnet will face 17 articles at Monday's special town meeting, 10/19, to decide on about $800,000 in spending. TM will also be asked to decide on the "Right to Farm" bylaw and a street acceptance.

The largest request comes from the fire chief asking for $265,000 from the ambulance fund to buy a new ambulance.

The second largest request is for $169,000 to purchase an excavator for the highway department.

The school department is looking for 109,294 for technology hardware.

An expenditure from the sewer enterprise fund was also in six figures, with 100,000 being requested for a sewer system infiltration and inflow evaluation.

The golf enterprise fund will get some shuffling of funds, if TM agrees, with some $116,552 getting moved from various line items within the Golf budget.

TM will also be asked to take $56,226 from the sewer betterment fund and move it to the general fund.

The Selectboard is requesting $12,000 to buy a copy machine for town hall and make a final payment on the previously leased to own machine.

The board will also ask Town Meeting to hire two workers, who are temporary now, and make them permanent employees. Article 9 asks for $45,000 to hire the maintenance employees.

The Selectboard also submitted a request for $14,000 to replace the oil fired burner and replace it with a new high efficiency gas fired boiler in the Parting Ways Building.

The police department is also asking for some funds in two articles.

The police chief is asking for $36,440 to buy tasers and $10,112 for bulletproof vests.

Article 15 requests $9,680 from the Community Preservation Fund to restore the scorer's booth on Joey Jason Field at Pope Park. And

And article 14, submitted by the Historical Commission, requests $500 to replace or repair historical signs throughout town.

One of the articles bound to garner some discussion asks for no money at all. Article 17 asks town meeting to adopt the "Right to Farm By-Law," to demonstrate the town's recognition of the right to farm in the community.

Submitted by the Agricultural Commission, the new by-law will signal the town's support agriculture in Acushnet.

According to the state's Energy and Environmental Affairs website, the law is designed to "state with emphasis" the right to farm and a municipality's support of farming.

"This by-law encourages the pursuit of agriculture, promotesagriculture-based economic opportunities, and protects farmlands within a town by allowing agricultural uses and related activities to function with minimal conflict with abutters and town agencies."

Each town is free to tailor the law to its own specific needs as a community. Supporters have pointed to Acushnet's rural character as a great asset and say that the by-law will protect the town's natural beauty. town meeting will be held at

A time for conch

By ML Baron
Special to the Neighb News

After a morning's haul of traps, Captain Robert Sakwa was all "conched" out on a beautiful Tuesday, October 6. Although not as lucrative as a bunch of lobsters, there's still a market for the local "Smooth Conch*" or "Channeled Whelk" meat. Capt. Sakwa usually unloads his catch at Hoppy's Landing in Fairhaven.

According to Heather Haggerty of Big G Seafoods of New Bedford, the channeled whelk is processed at the facility. They are shucked, steamed and then frozen for shipment in the US.

She said they should not be confused with the Queen Conch from down south.

There are two states that have a high demand for "Scungilli": Rhode Island and New York, whose large Italian population has a special holiday Christmas Eve dinner called "The Feast of The Seven Fishes" or "Festa Dei Sette Pesci" when one of the seven served fish species is the Whelk.

*Pronounced "konk" in these parts, although the pronunciation is disputed by some.

LEFT: Captain Robert Sakwa holds out a "Smooth Conch," or "Channeled Whelk," the local conch that he catches in between the high times for lobstering. The meat of the Channeled Whelk, or local conch (pronounced konk) is used in stews and salads and is steamed, boiled, sauteed, fried or eaten raw in some dishes (see page 10 for recipe). RIGHT: Capt. Sakwa loads a fish tote full of conch into his pickup truck on Tuesday, 10/6, at Hoppy's Landing. Photos by ML Baron, West Island Weather station: www.WestIslandWeather.com

SMCU supports senior artists

Press Release

For the seventh consecutive year, Southern Mass Credit Union (SMCU) will have art work on display in the credit union's main office located at 123 Alden Road in Fairhaven, MA, coordinated by Bernice Ellis, volunteer, Alden Court and Rehab Center.

The paintings were created by the senior residents of Alden Court, also located in Fairhaven. The paintings are showcased prior to the center's annual art sale scheduled this year for November 12, 2015 from 6:30-8:30 at Alden Court. The sale raises funds to purchase art supplies for the class taught by Christine Cummings, Art Teacher, with the assistance of Bernice Ellis, volunteer. Christine has taught art at the center for 25 years.

The seniors look forward to the classes which meet twice a week and range from 6-10 students per session. Painting is great therapy, both mentally and physically for the seniors. Each senior chooses his/her own design based upon a common theme, e.g., seasonal, nature, nautical, etc., and completes the work over several weeks with Christine's guidance.

To support the art class and thank them for the New England scenic quilt (hand painted by the seniors) permanent display at SMCU's main office lobby, Daniel Waltz, President/CEO of SMCU, donated $500.00 to Chervl Foisy, Activities Director, Alden Nursing Court Care and Rehab Center for the Activities Fund.

"Southern Mass would like to thank the residents of Alden Court who are displaying their artwork and the beautiful quilt in our lobby," stated Waltz. "We are very pleased to help support their Activities Fund and would like to thank Christine and Cheryl for their efforts in creating such beautiful art work."

Man rescued from fire at McCormack Manor

Fairhaven Fire Dept. Press Release

At 9:45 p.m. on Tues., 9/29, the Fairhaven Fire Department responded to a report of smoke in an apartment at McCormack Manor, a multi family apartment building at 157 Washington Street containing 45 apartments.

On arrival crews found a moderate smoke condition in an occupied apartment. A box alarm was transmitted bringing additional apparatus and personnel to the scene.

Two Engines and a ladder truck responded. One elderly male resident was rescued from the apartment and transported by Fairhaven FD. Paramedics to St. Luke's Hospital in New Bedford for treatment of smoke inhalation. Firefighter G.B. Knowles rescued the occupant with the assistance of Police Officers Kevin Chasse and James Bettencourt of the Fairhaven Police Department.

The fire was contained to apartment #308 but the entire complex was evacuated as a precaution.

No estimate of damage was available and there were no other injuries reported according to Wayne Oliveira, Public Information Officer for the Fairhaven Fire Dept.

While crews were still at McCormack Manor, a fire alarm was received for the Titleist Distribution Plant on Bride Street. When crews arrived there they found a small fire in a shrink wrap machine that was quickly extinguished. No estimate of damage was available.
